New Grub Street is a novel by George Gissing published in 1891, which is set in the literary and journalistic circles of 1880s London. Gissing revised and shortened the novel for a French edition of 1901.

New Grub Street - Wikipedia

New Grub Street concerns itself no further with the kind of aesthetic evocation of a panoramic landscape of the city that this passage suggests. Instead, the book presents us with, in John Goode's words, a London of struggling writers "living in a middle-class style on a working-class income".
